

Natural vs. Treated Gemstones: Which Is Better for Astrology?

Gemstones are naturally occurring precious gemstones that emerge from the depths of the earth. They fill the wearer's life with prosperity, astrological benefits of gemstones, happiness, success, health, satisfaction, and good fortune. They help a person overcome life obstacles, overcome problems and emerge victorious with a sense of satisfaction.

Understanding Natural Gemstones and Their Quality

Crystals are extracted from mines, and these rough stones are cut into gemstones. These gemstones are cut into various shapes and sizes depending on their quality. The criteria that define quality include colour hue, colour saturation, transparency, lustre, impurities, and unique optical properties (if any).

High-quality natural gemstones, including ruby beads with the desired colour and no obvious impurities, are highly valued and sought after in the market for astrological, jewellery, and decorative purposes. Therefore, lower quality stones are often enhanced to fetch a better price.

Common Gemstone Treatments and Their Effects

Gemstones are often subjected to treatments such as heating, coating, diffusion, oiling, dyeing, bleaching, radiation, glass filling, waxing, etc. Different treatments serve different purposes. Some alter the gemstone's colour, some enhance its lustre, some improve its transparency, while others alter its appearance.

For example: amethyst stones are often heated to change their purple colour to the yellow of citrine stones; both are varieties of the mineral quartz.

Treating gemstones enhances their beauty natural gemstones and conceals their flaws. This makes them more beautiful, attractive and valuable. However, treatment also changes the nature of gemstones. Treated gemstones lose their natural properties and acquire the properties of synthetic gemstones.

Why Choose Natural Gemstones for Astrology?

Natural gemstones take over a million years to form, and during this time, they accumulate extraordinary positive energy. Chemically treated gemstones do not possess the magical properties of pure, unprocessed gemstones. Genuine gemstones treated with chemicals do not produce any result (and in some cases, may even produce negative/adverse results). Therefore, such gemstones are not preferred in astrology.

Astrological Beliefs About Natural Gemstones

This translates to: under no circumstances should a gemstone be heated to improve its colour and enhance its lustre, as such a gemstone will bring illness and misfortune to the person wearing it.

Natural vs. Treated Gemstones for Astrological Purposes

It's true that astrologically, even radiant and clean gemstones are considered preferable, and such gemstones are expensive. However, wearing no gemstone at all is better than wearing treated gemstones, as such gemstones either provide only a superficial effect or have no effect at all. Furthermore, astrologically suitable gemstones are easily available even on a limited budget.

Is Oil Treatment Acceptable for Emerald Beads?

Note that a mild to moderate oil treatment is acceptable for emerald beads, as they are delicate stones sensitive to heat and prone to cracking when exposed to excessive heat. Immersing the stone in colourless oil (colored oils are not acceptable) helps preserve its longevity. This process neither enhances the stone's quality nor alters the inherent nature of the emerald.

How to Buy Natural Gemstones Online

You should keep a few things in mind, especially when purchasing gemstones for astrological purposes. You should always buy genuine, natural gemstones and buy them online from a trusted or qualified gemologist to ensure their authenticity and quality.

Importance of Gemstone Certification and Lab Reports

When purchasing a gemstone always request a lab report for ruby beads from a reputable laboratory; the report should clearly state details regarding any treatments the stone has undergone. If any treatment has been performed, it must be mentioned in the report.
